

ANY EXPLANATION?

The illustration is from the reverse of a King George VI £1, 1951 Type. The dealer from whom I bought this single copy had quite a number of them, some in blocks! The cancel is a single line blue crayon type cancel. I sent the stamp to Roy and his comment was, "I'm not convinced that it comes under the heading category of a 'Perfin'! I wonder if all the stamps were perforated in the same way, i.e. a block of 6 holes and a group of four at the same grid spacing? It's not Braille is it?"

As far as I can remember the holes were the same on all stamps. I will look very carefully the next time I see them at the end of May. I am sure the dealer will not have sold them all by then.
